

UNDERSTANDING COMMERCIAL LITIGATION

Running a business means legal problems will arise, and from time to time, litigation may be required. When this happens, it is crucial to have an experienced legal team at your side to offer well-informed advice and quality representation.

Some of the incidents that may lead to commercial litigation include:

- Annual audits
- Breach of contract
- Business contracts
- Compliance with operating agreements
- Dissolutions
- Employment manuals
- Failure to render payments or performance
- Franchises
- Meeting compliance
- Nonconforming goods
- Ownership structures
- Partnership agreements
- Terminations

Becoming involved in a commercial litigation case without benefit of an experienced attorney can result in the other party taking advantage of you and your company without your knowledge.
